You don't have to be fat to be soft

There are two ways to have softer skin. We recommend the second—medicated Dermassage Lotion.

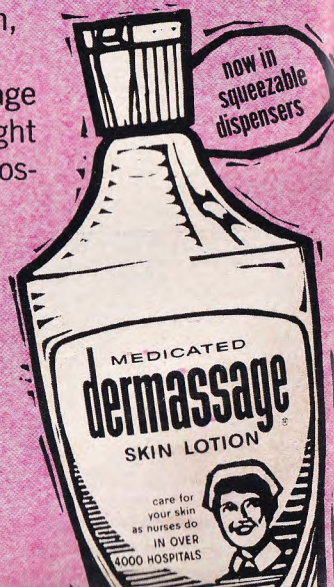

You see, famous Dermassage is no thin, watered-down, perfumed-up lotion.

Dermassage supplies the emollients, the moisturizers, the healing agents a woman needs to fight dry, rough, irritated skin.

And Dermassage loves to get into the fight against dry skin. In fact, over 4,000 hospitals have chosen its extra-effective medication for regular patient skin care.

So no matter what you weigh, don't struggle along with rough, tough, dry skin. Soften often with Dermassage Lotion. Or try super-moisturizing Dermassage Skin Cream.

"How we retired in 15 years with $300 a month"

"Here we are, living in Southern California. We've a little house just a few minutes' walk from the beach, with flowers and sunshine all year. For, you see, I've retired. We're getting a check for $300 a month that will keep us financially independent as long as we live.

"But if it weren't for that $300, we'd still be living in Forest Hills, and I'd still be working. Strangely, it's thanks to something that happened, by chance, in 1952. It was August 17, my fortieth birthday.

"To celebrate, Peg and I were going out to the movies. While she dressed, I was leafing through a magazine. Somehow my eyes rested on an ad. It said, 'You don't have to be rich to retire.'

"Well, we'd certainly never been rich. We spent money as fast as it came in. And here I was forty already. Half my working years were gone.

"This ad told of a way that a man of 40—with no big bank account, but just fifteen or twenty good earning years ahead—could get a guaranteed income of $300 a month. It was called the Phoenix Mutual Retirement Income Plan. No harm in looking into it, I thought. When Peg came down, I was tearing a corner off the page. I mailed it that night.

"Fifteen years went by. They were busy, unpredictable years. But my Phoenix Mutual Plan was one thing I never had to worry about! 1967 came...I got my first Phoenix Mutual check—and retired! We sold the house and drove west. We're living a new kind of life. Best of all, we've security a rich family might envy. Our $300 a month will keep coming as long as we live."

as we see it

■ It no doubt has occurred to network heads that the more we see of programs that are not interrupted by commercials, the less happy we are with programs that are interrupted.

Yet the economic facts are such that only a few programs can be delivered to viewers without American television's jarring advertising breaks.

■ Because the Bell Telephone Company sponsors an entire program, it can decide exactly when and how its commercials will be presented. Bell has chosen to run its musical shows without interruption, with the commercials grouped at the end of the programs. On CBS Playhouse General Telephone & Electronics has placed its messages before and after the dramas. Hallmark with its plays, and Ford with its movie "The Robe," exercise commendable restraint.

Such relief from interruptions—which is like a gift to the viewer—is not possible when there are six or eight or a dozen advertisers paying for a program. To the advertiser, the ideal is to have your ad stand alone during a commercial break. To most viewers the ideal is to bunch the commercials and break into the show less often. What we get is usually a compromise, such as the two one-minute spots during most movie interruptions.

■ New TV Code provisions limit the number of commercial breaks there may be during each time period and, as a sop to advertisers, a rule up for approval would also limit the number of commercials that may be run during each break.

The trick is to balance economic needs and audience interest. If we are not to become immune to television advertising, the advertising must be clever instead of obnoxious, broadcasters must exercise restraint, and viewers must be fully aware of how the business of television works.

WHAT THE NEGRO WANTS FROM TV

By Art Peters

A considered discussion at a time when some contend that the medium is enraging and frustrating black viewers

There was a time, 15 years ago, even 10 years ago, when Negroes were a rarity in television and the inclusion of a colored actor or actress in drama or situation comedy in anything other than a menial servant's role was guaranteed to produce controversy, raging debate, angry reaction from Southern viewers and possible sponsor withdrawal.

Today, in this the enlightened age of civil rights, the barriers of race have been lowered and Negroes are gaining acceptance in television.

Unfortunately, they are gaining acceptance as Negroes, not as human beings. That is, they are seldom shown as rounded, breathing, living characters with whom the audience can become really involved.

Part of the problem is, of course, that television to a large extent mirrors American society, in which, despite substantial gains, the Negro still plays only a limited role.

This raises the key question of whether television should not make an effort to lead rather than just to keep up with the parade.

George Norford, high-ranking Negro executive with the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company, has this perceptive observation: "Television is doing a lot to improve the Negro image, but not nearly enough. When all of television's good deeds for Negroes are lumped together, they are still so infinitesimal they are almost lost in the over-all big picture.

"It's not enough for television merely to reflect the existing Negro subculture in its drama programs. Television can and must use its persuasiveness and power to create a new acceptance among whites of the Negro and a new awareness on the part of the Negro himself of his own ability and potential. Television could be the catalyst, the force that creates and promotes racial understanding. By merely keeping step with current social trends instead of taking the lead in seeking new horizons in race relations, television is missing out on a signal opportunity to contribute."

P. Jay Sidney, veteran Negro actor who has appeared in more than 200 television dramas, takes this position: "Negroes rarely get the opportunity to portray human beings on television. They are usually cast in the role of auxiliaries to white people. Their only reason for existence on the screen, their raison d'être, is for the benefit of white people in the story."

Bill Cosby, star of the espionage series I Spy and television's most celebrated Negro actor, has this to say: "Writers and producers seem to think you need a special reason for a role to be played by a Negro—that he has to pounce on someone or be pounced upon. Because of this, Hollywood has helped to promote a negative image of the black man. When a Negro comes on the screen, the audience immediately tenses up. They know they are about to witness some violence, whether physical, verbal or emotional. If someone were to make a film about a Negro who didn't have any great conflict because of his color, who loved and was loved by a black girl and raised a black family, the audience would come back to see it again, looking for some hidden meaning."

In this way two Negro actors, intimate with television and the movies, sum up not only the plight of Negro actors and actresses, but the problems of their flesh-and-blood counterparts in real life as well.

The fact is that many Negroes feel that only grudging desegregation has been achieved and that the real goal of integration remains →

Mr. Peters is a city editor of a Negro newspaper and author of numerous magazine articles.

Walter Carroll, sales manager for KDIA, the San Francisco area's largest Negro radio station, has this to say: "There have been three civil-rights acts passed in the last 10 years, but it has not made that much difference."

What difference there is, and there is a difference, comes in the number of roles awarded to Negroes, a growth reflecting the growth in civil rights.

The Negroes are, in fact, seen in a variety of dramatic roles on network programs. However, Norford is right when he says TV's acceptance of Negroes parallels that of society at large but doesn't blaze any new paths.

Unless they are cast as servants or entertainers, Negroes are rarely involved in dramatic scenes which show America at play, be they at country club dances or church socials.

Negroes are almost never cast as judges, airline pilots, boat captains, college presidents, cowboys, bank executives, salesmen, editors or engineers. Negroes are generally accepted in television dramas these days as policemen, teachers, FBI agents, soldiers, doctors, espionage agents, radio-and-electronics workers and detectives.

There are notable exceptions, of course, as there are to most rules, but even when a Negro is cast in the role of an executive or professional man, his demeanor by necessity is usually servile or compliant, seldom domineering, harsh or superior.

And, ironically, the same ground rules which forbid Negroes to be cast as domineering executives usually prevent them from portraying criminals, unless, of course, they are penitent or remorseful.

In discussing these problems, actor Sidney referred to his testimony before a Congressional committee which, five years ago, was investigating charges of discrimination in the TV industry.

"It's been five long years," he declares, "but things haven't changed much for the black man in television. Casting directors have now latched onto the idea of placating civil-rights groups by placing a Negro in a key role here and there, perhaps as a policeman or a nurse. Earlier, the Negro was portrayed in films as a maid or a teeth-chattering, knee-knocking, 'Feet-don't-fail-me-now' flunky. But, even today, the Negro remains a servant, at least psychologically, in the movies and on television. His roles are a little more sophisticated, to be sure, but he is nevertheless a servant, a type of auxiliary to white people."

Sidney cites his own experience last spring when he was hired as a regular in an important supporting role on the popular daytime soap opera As the World Turns.

"I was supposed to be a research physician in that series," he says, "and yet, emotionally and dramatically, I did not exist as a person. My whole function in those 14 segments was getting a white boy out of jail. I was a nonperson in the plot, a one-dimensional figure with no life of my own. I didn't have any problems. There were no things about which I was personally glad or sad, nothing toward which I personally aspired. I had no past, no future, no family. I existed only for that white boy. I was, in other words, an auxiliary, not a human being."

His tone suddenly becomes vehement. "Hell!" he explodes. "Life is not just going to your laboratory every day."

Unlike most of his contemporaries, Sidney has not been content merely to voice his concern about the status quo. During the past five years he has launched a one-man crusade against the industry, picketing television studios which don't hire Negro actors and actresses in representative numbers and buying ads in trade publications excoriating advertising agencies and sponsors for failure to use Negroes in televised commercials.

Despite his militancy, Sidney is one of the milder voices in the growing clamor against discrimination in television programming.

Fifty-one-year-old Florence Kennedy, outspoken Negro woman lawyer, who for many years has been active in civil-rights endeavors in New York City, says, "Let's face it, the situation has reached the crisis stage."

She believes that millions of black Americans subconsciously regard television in the same manner as the downtrodden peasants in some foreign country might regard a ruthless dictator who flaunts his power and wealth while his subjects grovel in poverty and destitution.

"Television," she declares, "feeds the frustrations and angers of the black masses by showing them a way of life they may never enjoy, a world from which they are forever barred. Although the ambitious Negro through sheer perseverance may rise above his circumstances and attain a position and money enabling him to buy the luxuries of life—a new car, a boat, a fancy home with swimming pool—he remains an outcast from the mainstream of society, unable, because of his color, to actually belong. Television, by excluding the Negro from most of its programs, helps to reinforce this image of rejection."

Paradoxically, the sound and fury are mounting against television at a time when the industry appears to be doing more than ever before in the Negro interest. Television's highest-ranking executives, convinced that most of the verbal brickbats are being thrown by a few misguided, uninformed and possibly envious persons, speak in wounded, exasperated tones of continuing Negro protests.

"There are five times as many Negroes appearing on television in feature roles today as there were only a few years ago," points out one well-known producer. "Frankly," he declares, "most of this fuss is being kicked up by Black Power groups. I think that the responsible Negro leaders are aware of the tremendous strides that Negroes have made on television."

The "responsible" Negro leaders are indeed aware of some progress, but they are not at all happy about it. Whitney Young, executive director of the National Urban League and a recognized moderate on civil rights, made this observation several weeks ago: "Perhaps stations would be more aware of their responsibility if they employed more Negroes. Federal law requires that any business holding a government contract must furnish proof of fair employment practices. Yet the Federal Communications Commission regularly grants valuable licenses to television and radio stations without such requirement, even though there are some notorious violations."

George Norford, who, in addition to his position at Westinghouse, coordinates the activities of the Broadcast Skills Bank, an agency developed by the networks in conjunction with the Urban League to recruit, train and employ Negroes for the broadcast industry, contends that progress is being made behind the cameras. He says: "Negroes on TV cannot all be Bill Cosbys or Sammy Davises or Nichelle Nicholses. Some have got to be just plain Joe Smith, technician; Harry Brown, accountant; Bob Jackson, writer. This is where roughly 92 percent of Negroes employed in TV are. Indeed, this is where most people employed in the industry are."

Another hopeful note is sounded by Mike Dann, vice president of programming for CBS-TV. "The Negro has achieved status and he has attained the highest responsible positions in → American life," Dann declares, "and if we in television are accurate writers and producers, we will show the Negro in various occupations and endeavors, not for the sake of recognition, but for the sake of accuracy."

Although Dann believes that television is slowly but surely getting around to fairly representing Negroes in dramatic roles, he agrees with Sidney that television continually fails to portray the Negro as a flesh-and-blood human being. "I think the real problem is creating dramas which really make you care about the Negro as a person," he says. "We do not have enough dramas in which the Negro portrays the kind of character with whom you can really identify. I think it is because the Negro is cast all too frequently in the role of a helpful person in solving someone else's problem, a type of person whom you don't really care about as a human being and who functions solely in support of the hero in the play."

The subject is obviously a sensitive one at the networks. At NBC, Mort Werner, vice president in charge of programming, declined to discuss it at all, sending word down through an aide, Charles Smith, that the network prefers to stand on its record.

Smith, in turn, pointed out that NBC has "pioneered" in developing such Negro television stars as Leslie Uggams, Nichelle Nichols, Bill Cosby and Don Mitchell. Next year, Smith said, Diannah Carroll may be the first Negro woman star of a weekly television drama series, if present plans jell and a pilot film she recently made is picked up by NBC.

Significantly, neither Cosby, who already is an NBC star, nor Miss Carroll, who soon may be, is satisfied with television's treatment of the Negro in drama roles.

In a recent first-person newspaper article, Cosby declared that Negro children in big-city ghettos have few black heroes to pattern their lives after other than the dope peddlers and pimps who wear diamond rings and drive flashy cars and who are impressive because they have found a way to beat the system.

Noting that most Negro doctors, lawyers and other professional men move out of the ghettos once they attain a measure of success, Cosby feels that the image of these hard-working, ambitious, successful black men is lost to Negro children.

"It is the responsibility of TV and films to build a better image for the Negro," Cosby insists. "I see no reason why there can't be films with Negro cowboys who can shoot and ride and do all these things that people respect in a cowboy. Why can't there be black pilots in war stories?"

Miss Carroll echoes Cosby's sentiments. "It is important that Negro children have symbols with which they can identify," she declares. "They must be taught to have pride in their blackness, and television can help them establish this identity."

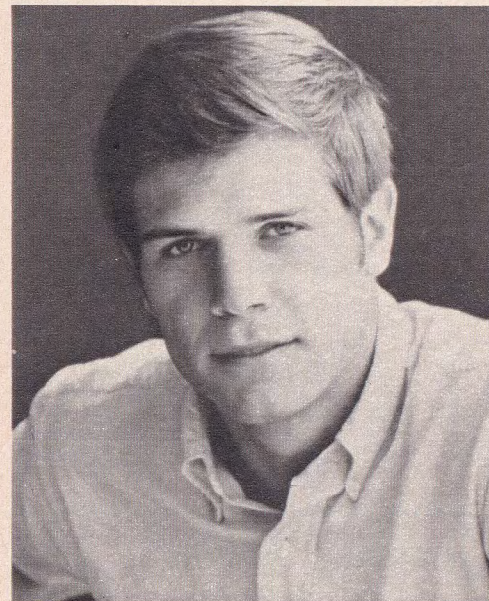

Civil-rights leaders and performers in the industry agree that as long as television continues—by ignoring the credentials of Negroes as human beings—to emulate the white society it serves, the medium will remain a negative force operating against the interests of the black man.

The dilemma is perhaps best summed up in the words of actor P. Jay Sidney:

"The image that Negroes have had since they were first dragged off of slave ships has been that they are something less than human. As long as this image persists, it will be impossible for any civil-rights laws that are passed to be enforced. When a Negro applies for a job, he not only has to qualify, he has to get past the image the white interviewer has of him. That image may have been reinforced only last night on TV." END

50,000,000 records prove that Eddy Arnold's brand of music has unlimited appeal

Let's see; there's corn pone, corn fritters, corn meal, cornstarch and corn sirup. Among the uses of corn there is another that emanates from 16th Avenue South—so-called Record Row—in Nashville, Tenn., and supports a $100,000,000-a-year industry with tentacles into every state and to some 400 radio stations broadcasting an unvarying and largely uninterrupted quota of Country and Western music.

Funny thing about Nashville! It stands at the crossroads of several great music traditions that have roots deep in America's memory: Negro blues, Southern mountain balladry, "Bluegrass" string bands, and work songs. And yet the city has become to many music fanciers the international symbol for a musicality of such numbing mindlessness and banality that some either won't or can't listen to it. (In Nashville, more than 20 recording studios, some working around the clock, produce nearly one out of every two pop recordings made in the United States.)

The automatic assumption about Country and Western music is that it is the private demesne of rural white Southerners and that the better-educated and more affluent Northern urbanites are much too sophisticated for it. "That's where you're fooling yourself," says the husky man, lounging in a New York hotel suite. He frowns and leans far forward in his chair. His hands are large and thick, like a plowboy's, and his voice is vintage Tennessee; but the hair is trimmed in a Harvard cut, and the clothes are tasteful and well-made.

"As of this moment, in every major city in this country—New York, Chicago, Minneapolis, Los Angeles—you have a country-music station," says Eddy Arnold, jabbing the air. "I sell more records in New York than I do in Nashville. Maybe it was true 12 or 15 years ago that country music had appeal only in the South. But we've taken the hayseed out of it; it's gotten exposed on major TV shows. It's a lot more acceptable now than it ever was before."

Arnold himself is a country singer of such widespread renown that the Music Operators of America—who control this Nation's juke boxes—named him the most popular singer on coin machines for 1966. He has sold close to 50,000,000 albums and single records, making him one of the 10 biggest record sellers of all time.

Time was when the banjo, mandolin and dobro guitar were the staple instruments of Country and Western music. Now violins and pianos and harps provide a more elegant background for the same soppy sentiments that always have characterized the more commercial aspects of Country and Western music.

A hard distinction must be made here between the rich old country

THE TENNESSEE PLOWBOY WITH THE HARVARD HAIRCUT

By Neil Hickey

tradition of musicians like Sam and Kirk McGee, and the Carter Family; and the bathetic ephemera which is cranked out through the Nashville meat grinder. Singers like Eddy Arnold and Marty Robbins are more concerned—and perhaps rightly so—with hits, charts, ratings and record sales than with the perpetuation of a musical tradition that grew up spontaneously among the American South's farmers, migrants and poor people. The Nashville Sound, as we know it today, is a citified and dolled-up version of that earlier, but still lively, form.

Still, the popularity of "pop country" music grows, despite its insularity from ideas and its fixation on love-sickness, and despite—or perhaps because of—the blind eye it turns on the complex world of 1968.

"I leave politics to politicians," Eddy Arnold says firmly. "I'm not trying to reconstruct the country. I can't stay in the bag I'm in and do that kind of material."

That attitude has made him a highly sought-after guest on the TV shows of such entrepreneurs as the Messrs. Dean Martin, Danny Kaye, Andy Williams, Johnny Carson, Perry Como and Mike Douglas. He'll be visible Feb. 9 on an NBC special produced by Chet Hagan, called "American Profile: Music from the Land," which will set out to describe the whole Country and Western phenomenon in the United States and give it a historical perspective. →

Some of Arnold's compeers—perhaps a bit jealously—claim that he has evolved into just another slick pop singer and disavowed his Grand Ole Opry origins. He has, in fact, scrupulously shaken the hayseed from his hair and adapted country sounds to the mass tastes of a broader audience. The songs are just as foolish, but coming from Arnold, they somehow manage to sound better.

The truth is that Eddy Arnold, whom Variety calls "The Frank Sinatra of the pop country field," has an ace in the hole. He happens to be an extraordinarily fine singer with an impeccable sense of musical rectitude. His voice is rich and true, better suited to the full-bodied background of violins and harps than of fiddles and banjos.

In May 1966 both Eddy Arnold and country music reached a turning point. Arnold gave his first concert in New York City, an opulent affair at Carnegie Hall, no less (he has another date there next March 23), where an enthusiastic, sell-out crowd heard the tuxedo-clad crooner—backed by an 18-piece orchestra—deliver such down-home ditties as "The Wreck of the Old 97," "Make the World Go Away," "Cotton Fields," "Dear Heart," "Tennessee Stud," "The Cattle Call," "The Last Word in Lonesome Is Me."

At the end of it, the audience of city slickers gave him a standing ovation, and The New York Times reported the next day that "Mr. Arnold was a sure-footed, expressive interpreter. He showed much of the unpressured crooning and relaxed phrasing that have made him such a long-standing favorite with listeners."

Carnegie Hall is a far piece from the cotton farm in Henderson, Tenn., where Arnold grew up during the hard times of the 1930's. (He's 49 now.) His father died when he was 11, and the family lost the farm, then rented it back from the man who bought it at auction. The family started life anew with just a couple of mules and a cow.

Arnold had to quit high school to work the farm; when the crops were planted, he and his two brothers (one was killed in World War II; he has one sister) took odd jobs until harvest time. He toyed with an old guitar, as many Southern youths do, and hired out for some square dances and church picnics.

At 18 he hitched a ride to Jackson, Tenn., landed a job singing on a radio station, and later moved on to other stations in Memphis and St. Louis. In 1941 he married one Sally Gayhart, whom he had met working in a five-and-dime store in Louisville, and headed for Nashville, where he joined, as a sideman, a group called Pee Wee King and his Golden West Cowboys.

Arnold started recording for RCA Victor in Nashville in 1945 and in an indecently short span of time was selling records at a sufficient clip to change his way of living. The slicked-up and slightly reformed Tennessee Plowboy (as he used to bill himself) became one of Nashville's most solid citizens, and today he owns hundreds of acres of farmland outside the city and is pointed out to tourists as something of a civic monument.

What makes Eddy run? Why this passion for mass appeal in his music? "I'm an egotist," answers Arnold. "I want my artistry to be as acceptable to John Q. Public as Frank Sinatra's or Tony Bennett's. I hate the thought that I'd work this hard and not achieve broad recognition."

Then he removes his unshod feet from a tabletop, takes a long pause and says: "I've been broke. And I've experienced hunger. Now, I'm determined to be comfortable for the rest of my life." He says it earnestly, and you believe him. END

THE DOAN REPORT

ABC Battles Shortage of Funds

ABC was left in a critical money bind when International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation decided to drop plans for a merger, and the network is desperately seeking cheaper ways of filling its prime time. The result, starting next fall, may be a mixed bag of more old movies and some new shows smacking of TV's early days of live programming. Canceled film series are likely to be replaced in some time periods by live-on-tape entertainments, especially variety and game shows which can be far less expensive than drama and situation comedies. Publicly, ABC can be expected to paint its improvisation as a deliberate attempt "to do what TV does best: taking people places and giving them a sense of it's-what's-happening." At least that's how a top ABC executive bravely described the approach. Thus, a new 90-minute daily variety show with comedian Dick Cavett as host, being inserted in ABC's daytime schedule in March, could well illustrate what the network has in mind as evening fare next season. Symptomatic, too, is the shift upstairs recently of ABC network president Thomas W. Moore to become "group vice president" over several parent-company divisions. His successor as network boss is Elton H. Rule, who has been running ABC's Los Angeles station, KABC-TV. A TV station man knows how to turn out programs on a shoestring.

As for ABC's evening movies, it is not beyond possibility that ABC will run them Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights next season. The network has enough old films on hand to add a third weekly "movie night"—as NBC is doing on Mondays starting in September—and there is some belief the ABC features might fare as well, if not better, against NBC's pictures on Mondays and CBS's on Fridays than they now do bucking Bonanza and The Smothers Brothers on Sunday nights. ABC already, of course, has Wednesdays staked out. So far, no network has risked pitting movies against movies. But few in the business doubt that such competition is coming. ABC's trick may be to raise the curtain on its pictures at 8:30 P.M. (ET), to hook viewers half an hour before the rival chains crank up their projectors. In this event, the 10:30-11 time slot might be used for an ABC News roundup or even turned back to the affiliated stations to save programming money. Economies in news and public affairs also are more than likely.

The two-and-one-half-hour prime-time movie will make its debut next summer. NBC has 10 of them in the hopper and will screen them Tuesday nights from 8:30 to 11 (EDT). That means no reruns of Jerry Lewis. But the prospects, say NBC sources, are "very good" that he will be back in the fall. A series for which the network had far higher hopes, The Danny Thomas Hour, will not return according to present information.

KEEP OUR MONEY HOME

With the American dollar in such big trouble and with the President trying to cut down on our spending abroad, why do the television quiz and game shows continue to give away so many European trips as prizes? There are plenty of places in the U.S. where they could send their winners.

Calvin Castine
Champlain, N. Y.

OVER 25

Would someone please tell the producers of variety shows and also commercials that we were not all born and raised in a discotheque. More than 50 percent of the population in this country is still over 25 years of age and since the kids have plenty of their own rock 'n' roll shows, does every variety show have to have one of those groups?

Charlotte Mulford
Monroe, Conn.

CRITICIZING OUR CRITIC

What a comfort it is to know that we have such an astute mind as Cleveland Amory's nit-picking the nightly offerings for us. With his usual consistency he deftly turns aside any program that proffers a modicum of adult entertainment and comedy, and gushes with enthusiasm over the more infantile offerings. What a sight it must be to see him languishing before the TV set, chuckling with anticipation of the next episode of The Flying Nun, while he pores over his favorite book, "See Spot Run!"

ABOUT THOSE BRITISH

I have just finished reading your Dec. 30 article "A Situation Comedy About a Bigot?" Oh, how I envy those Britishers. For those of us who might like to relax in front of the TV set, but don't find relaxing the shows in which the Good Guy is fleeing the Bad Guy, there is, with few exceptions, precious little left except the standard situation comedy. Why should America take a back seat to supposedly conservative Britain? If the British can produce such programs why can't our networks "dare" to do something as "drastic?"

Cynthia MacGregor
Yonkers, N. Y.

I hope the day never dawns when American TV will allow this so-called freedom for American writers as the BBC has done.

Anne Burns
Westover AFB, Mass.

[TV GUIDE's letters this week continued to be highly critical of the quality of cartoon shows on Saturday mornings; were angry about the amount of football telecast over New Year's (that is, the women, at least); and were indignant over the cancellation of Maya and Hondo. Perhaps most surprising were letters protesting against possible cancellation of Star Trek. TV GUIDE has been informed by NBC that there are no plans to cancel the popular show.—Ed.]

THIS WEEK'S MOVIES

By Judith
Crist

CAPTAIN NEWMAN (NBC), Saturday
THE LIVELY SET (NBC), Tuesday
WHERE THE SPIES ARE (CBS), Thursday
ISLAND OF LOVE (CBS), Friday

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

It's cult time via the week's network movies and aficionados of high or low camp, five-cent psychiatry, spy spoofs and latter-day versions of the Dr. Kildare or Andy Hardy schools of cinema can find their feast.

"Hush... Hush, Sweet Charlotte" is strictly for us devotees of the mystery-horror tale in all its pure and impure manifestations, with some absolutely stunning camera work and as the lagniappe a number of old-pro bravura performances (by Bette Davis, Agnes Moorehead, Joseph Cotten, Olivia de Havilland and Mary Astor in particular). The blood is on the cleaver, the madwoman is on the loose, the headless corpse is on the prowl and the Guignol is about as grand as it can get. Lots of goodies for us blood-cultists; the faint of heart and/or weak of stomach can pass this one by.

"Where the Spies Are" is also pure entertainment and your enjoyment is predicated largely on your tolerance of hokum and susceptibility to charm. David Niven supplies the latter as the middle-aged reluctant agent who finds himself in photogenic Lebanon up to his ears with Soviet agents and up to his heart with lovely Francoise Dorleac in a mélange of urbane satire, sordid realism and dime-novel nonsense decked out with topicality. Tuck your intelligence out of the way and you can go almost the whole route with this one.

For at-home psychiatry (with us armchair analysts making quicker diagnoses than the script-bound professional), there's "Captain Newman." Gregory Peck is the Kildare in khaki and a good hunk of the therapy in this Army hospital situation is provided by Tony Curtis's archaic dialect comedy and Angie Dickinson's lovely legs. But on the plus side there's Peck's authoritative portrayal of Newman, and a brilliant, writhing performance by Ed-die Albert as a schizophrenic.

The pickings beyond these are slim indeed, however. There's a rerun of "Island of Love," which proved in its showing last February that neither Robert Preston nor Tony Randall nor Walter Matthau can save a strictly-from-hunger script and a plethora of plot contrivance. And "The Lively Set," a sort of Andy-Hardy-on-wheels piece of antique plotting, stars a gas turbine engine (the film seems at times to be a 95-minute commercial for it) surrounded by a quartet of young people sporting shiny teeth, well-groomed hair and wholesome exuberance. It comes out four-square for teamwork, marriage and a college education and has a stock-car race sequence that's superbly photographed. So is lovely Pamela Tiffin—but there's too much knock, too little octane to make this movie merit more than the bottom of a double-bill.

[The nonmovie version of "Laura," bumped last week by the President's speech, bumps this week's sixth network movie.—Ed.]

5:00 10

RETURN COLOR The Emmy-winning 11-week series opens this seventh season of filmed matches, featuring ranking U.S. and international golfers, and the world's most scenic and demanding courses.

Today: Gardner Dickinson and Mason Rudolph tee off at the Guatemala Country Club in Guatemala City. The winner collects $7000; the loser, $3000.

The par-72, 6600-yard course has natural hazards as its principal challenge. Golfers must cope with the thin, mile-high altitude, which plays tricks with wood and iron shots; and deep barrancas (ravines) guarding many greens. Man-made hazards include tight fairways, which are guarded by stands of pine and cypress, and the soft greens, which hold approach shots well—but make putting difficult.

Golfing greats Squire Gene Sarazen and Jimmy Demaret report. (60 min.)

Bette Davis offers a chilling tour-de-force performance in this 1964 excursion into Grand Guignol.

The scene: a decaying Louisiana plantation. Its crumbling ante-bellum mansion houses Charlotte Hollis, an eccentric recluse; Velma, her devoted if mildly deranged maid; and Miriam, a visiting cousin. The memory of John Mayhew, murdered 37 years ago, is preying on Charlotte's mind: Grisly reminders suggest that her lover has returned from the grave.

The film, which received seven Oscar nominations, reunited Miss Davis and director Robert Aldrich, who teamed for "What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?"

Hush... Hush. Sweet Charlotte

Can a $10,000 Life Insurance policy be worth as much as $34,860, on Annual Premiums of $189.40?

Believe it or not, it can.

If it's a SAVINGS BANK LIFE INSURANCE policy, purchased at age 30, a $10,000 life paid up at age 65 plan can be worth $34,860 at age 42 by using dividends* to buy additional amounts of one year term insurance. This provides maximum protection during the years in mid-career, when men and their families need it most. In addition, this SBLI plan can still be worth $17,510 at age 65, with important cash value for use in buying an annuity to supplement retirement income.

For full information about this extraordinary SAVINGS BANK LIFE INSURANCE feature (#D-5), illustrated here, or any other SBLI plan at your present age, visit your Mutual Savings Bank and ask for personal counselling about the SAVINGS BANK LIFE INSURANCE policy best suited to your particular needs. It could be one of the most important steps you ever take toward financial security.

*Based on 1967 dividend scales paid or exceeded by 38 savings and insurance banks.

Founded as a public service, SAVINGS BANK LIFE INSURANCE is sold only through Mutual Savings Banks direct to people who live or work in Massachusetts. And although not guaranteed, dividends have been paid to policyholders every year since 1908.

Only your Mutual Savings Bank offers you Savings Accounts, Mortgage Loans, and Savings Bank Life Insurance.

9:00 2 NET JOURNAL

NORTH VIETNAM

An abridged version of a documentary written, filmed and narrated by Felix Greene, a British journalist who has voiced opposition to the war in Vietnam.

In North Vietnam, Greene recorded the results of U.S. bombing missions: peasants and members of the Volunteer Youth Brigade rebuilding roads and bridges; wounded civilians at a makeshift hospital; and anti-aircraft squads firing rifles at U.S. jets.

Ho Chi Minh is shown visiting with villagers; and there are interviews with a captured American flyer, and a North Vietnamese farmer who describes a U.S. bombing attack.

Also: a debate on the film and the war in general. Participants: political scientist Robert Scalapino and David Schoenbrun, journalist and professor of Vietnamese history at Columbia University. Moderator: Dick McCutchen. (Two hours)

CLOSE-UP 10:00 7 8 9 EVERETT DIRKSEN'S WASHINGTON

Executive producer Lester Cooper: "Dirksen may be the last of the great orators like Senator Borah and William Jennings Bryan. I wanted to capture the flavor of the man and see the Capitol through his eyes."

SPECIAL COLOR The Senate Minority Leader guides this tour of the Capitol building and reminisces with correspondent Howard K. Smith about his more than 30 years on the Hill.

Cameras also go to Pekin, Ill., Dirksen's home town. In interviews, his brothers Tom (his twin) and Ben discuss their boyhood days.

Also covered: Dirksen's career as an entertainer. His recent album "Gallant Men" was an immediate success. He has made two more recordings since, and is—at age 72—the Nation's fifth best-selling male recording star.

Written and produced by Jim Benjamin ("Red China: Year of the Gun," "Take a Deep, Deadly Breath"). (60 min.)

A Passage to India

India's Santha Rama Rau based this drama on E. M. Forster's memorable novel.

Set in the 1920's, the drama opens in India with the arrival of Mrs. Moore, an Englishwoman who is visiting her son Ronald, and Ronald's fiancée Adela. Genuinely interested in learning about India, the women become friendly with a young Indian doctor. Their casual breach of the racial barrier rapidly becomes a choking knot of bigotry, blind loyalties and shattered friendships.

Zia Mohyeddin portrays Dr. Aziz, the role he created when the drama appeared on Broadway in 1962. Adapted for TV by John Maynard. (Two hours)

FLESH AND BLOOD

SPECIAL COLOR A shattering contemporary drama featuring an all-star cast.

Set in New York, the work is an intense family portrait painted in dark shades of mortality, memories and time.

The family . . . Harry (Edmond O'Brien): Proud and gusty, he climbs steel beams to build skyscrapers. Growing old, and tortured by the past and fantasies of death, he says "They're walling us in!"—as if someone had stolen his horizon.

Della (Kim Stanley), his wife, is strangling on an ugly secret.

John (E. G. Marshall) is Harry's brother. Dying, fatalistic and alcoholic, he is leaving the family—"to go into the ground, where I came from."

The children . . . Nona (Suzanne Pleshette) sees her life defaced by guilt and a failing marriage. Faye (Kim Darby) inherits two decades of pain. Howard (Robert Duvall), a cripple, is a mirror of the others' inability to speak or act.

Playwright William Hanley, author of the critically acclaimed "A Slow Dance on the Killing Ground," uses vigorous dialog as counterpoint to subtle glimpses of each character's personal hell. Produced and directed by Arthur Penn ("Bonnie and Clyde," "The Miracle Worker"). (Two hours)

'Dammit, I Am Cochise'

'Authentic' is the producer's word for 'High Chaparral,' though rubber six-shooters and horse-shy cowboys occasionally get in the way

By Richard Warren Lewis

The dusty limousine drove out of the Paramount studio gates promptly at 8 A.M., carrying a yawning cargo of actors dressed in boots, denims and 10-gallon hats. The half-dozen members of The High Chaparral cast idly passed around copies of the trade paper Variety and glanced at scripts as the vehicle negotiated three smoggy freeways, passing Eternal Valley Memorial Park, Friendly Valley Active Adult Community and American Beauty Homes.

Involved in their own fantasy world, the actors barely noticed such transitory landmarks. They were headed for a day's shooting at venerable Vasquez Rocks, a county park 43 miles distant from Los Angeles, closely resembling the Mexico-Arizona borderlands that inspired the new series.

There, beneath the forbidding splendor of jagged rock formations, a perspiring director clad in dungarees hovered under a multicolored beach umbrella of the sort usually found poolside at the Beverly Hills Hotel. A network of insulated wires snaked across the parched earth.

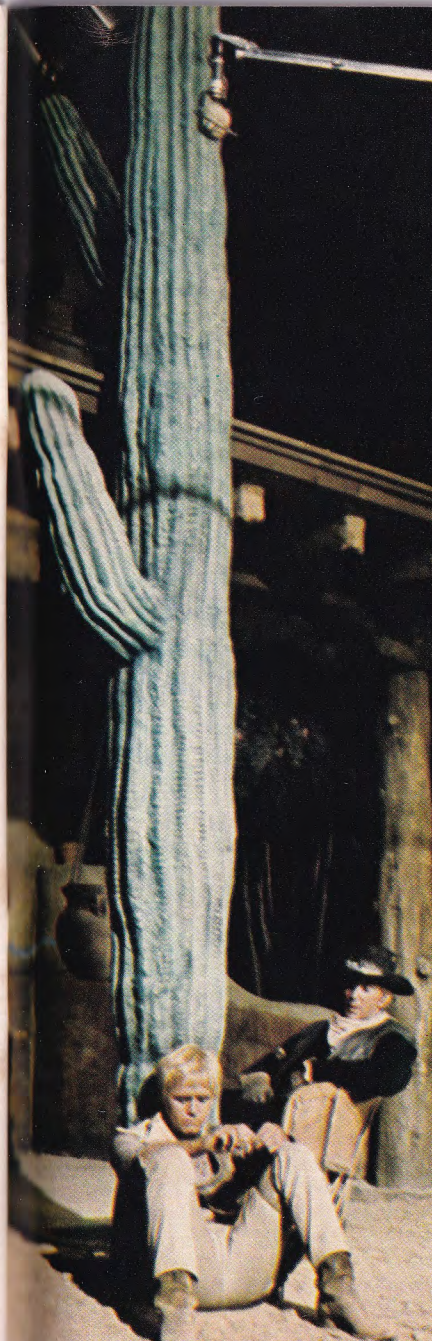

The brush-covered ridges surrounding Vasquez Rocks are dry and hot. Dying yucca trees forlornly dot the setting. It had not rained in three months. Before the end of the humid, 100-degree day, the Chaparral company would consume 70 gallons of water, more than twice the rations required on their customary Arizona location.

Most of the filming for the post-Civil War saga had been accomplished in the adobe pueblo of Old Tucson, a settlement situated amidst 30,000 acres of natural desert growth and mesa land. A century earlier, this was the turf where Apache leaders like Diablo, Geronimo, Naquino and Cochise, the leader of the Chiricahuas, fought Spaniards, Mexicans, American settlers and troops of the 1st U.S. Cavalry. The area was rich with legends of sourdough miners and Indian scalp hunters.

It was the historical basis and geographic reality of this region that persuaded producer David Dortort to create The High Chaparral, the long-awaited sequel to his greatest television success, Bonanza.

To tell the story of the Apache nation's struggle for survival, he methodically pored through archives at the Huntington and UCLA libraries in California. The scholarly looking producer also studied dusty old diaries, letters and military reports on file at the Department of the Interior in Washington. He reread scores of volumes and documents dealing with his specialty, Western lore.

What emerged was an abiding sympathy for the 3000 Apaches who, against overwhelming odds, attempted to protect their sprawling, 500,000-square-mile homeland against land grabbers, bandidos and corrupt government bureaucrats during the 1870's.

Their champion, Gen. George F. Crook, became the prototype for Chaparral's Big John Cannon—a grizzled cattle rancher imbued with the dream that Apaches, American settlers and Mexicans could live in an atmosphere of harmony, rather than extermination.

Dortort also decided to deflate long-standing shibboleths embraced by many Hollywood film makers. History taught him that the Apaches were other than the debased society generally depicted in big-screen Westerns. He felt, furthermore, that there should be some recognition of contributions made by the advanced Mexican culture, which predated the white immigration into the Southwest by 400 years.

"We're trying to make restitution to what I feel are damaged reputations," he explained. "High Chaparral is based on the truth. We have a commitment to authenticity."

Chaparral (shop-a-ral) is the generic label for all moisture-hungry vegetation that grows in the foot- → hills bordering Southwestern desert valleys. Chaps, a word derived from chaparral, are the open-backed, leather overalls worn by wranglers as protection against cacti, horse bites and thickets of stiff or thorny shrubs.

The cameras were rolling at Vasquez Rocks as a young man on horseback galloped out of a herd of grazing cattle. The horse pulled up short and actor Mark Slade dismounted into a pile of underbrush, tangling his feet. "You——," he sneered at the horse. Three additional takes were necessary when he muffed his ensuing lines. There was a day's growth on his boyish face. The portions of his hair that had not been bleached by the sun were anointed with a coloring called Summer Blonde. He was playing Billy Blue Cannon, misunderstood son of Big John, visionary family patriarch.

Dortort had modeled this pivotal character after his own son Fred, a junior at the University of California at Berkeley. "When I started Bonanza, my son was 10 years old," he recalled. "We had a real father-son thing. We did things like rock hunting together. Now we don't see eye to eye on anything. He wears his hair long. He's a very bright boy, but he does rather poorly in school. He feels that the system of higher education is not oriented to reality."

For Bonanza, Dortort devised a family where the father was strong, masculine and respected by his sons. "That was the big reason for the success of Bonanza," he observes. "No other show had that as its statement. Television was dedicated to the proposition that all American men were somehow fools."

It struck Dortort that television was also ignoring one of the common afflictions of today's society—the generation gap. "What about families—like mine—where father and sons have trouble communicating?" he theorized. "I thought this might be interesting in terms of Chaparral."

Following months of auditions, Dortort had tentatively decided on another actor for the part of Billy Blue. The day before rehearsals were scheduled to commence, he reluctantly agreed to meet Slade.

Slade had worked on only one Western in eight years as an actor, a Rawhide segment in which he played a bellhop. He had recently concluded a season as Hollis, the seasick seabee on The Wackiest Ship in the Army.

"I'm just not the Western type," he told his agent. "Let's try for something else."

"This is your part," the agent pleaded. "They describe him as a young Jimmy Dean."

Slade waited impatiently outside of Dortort's office for 45 minutes. He was already late for a fishing trip. When he was finally called, he pushed open Dortort's door and shouted: "Jimmy Dean is still alive!"

Nonplussed, Dortort handed him a script. "I started reading," says Slade, "and I thought: 'Man, this part is really something, like everything I've worked for since the American Academy in New York.'"

The key scene in his audition was an explosive exchange between father and son. Dortort read the part of Cannon. "You can leave this ranch any time you want to," he said mechanically. "No one's stoppin' you."

"I ain't about to leave," Slade snarled. "This is as much my place as it is yours." Without missing a beat, he grabbed Dortort's lapels and yanked him up out of his swivel chair.

Dortort phoned him at home eight hours later. "You know, this is absolute insanity," he said, "but you've got the part." Slade celebrated at the Raincheck Room, a West Hollywood saloon frequented mainly by out-of-town actors. He ordered a magnum of champagne, finished half of it and used the remainder to douse himself over the head and squirt friends at the bar.

When Henry Darrow learned that he had won one of the five recurring Latin roles in the series, his champagne celebration was somewhat more subdued. "After all these years in Hollywood—13 years I've been here," he mused, toasting his manager, "all of a sudden I'm discovered."

Dortort had spotted the craggy-faced actor two years before, performing as a lighthearted Mexican peasant in "The Wonderful Ice Cream Suit," a one-act play. He then proceeded to write the part of Manolito—the son of a powerful hacendado who renounces his father's wealth—with Darrow in mind.

When it came time to cast Manolito, Darrow had disappeared. "I had been type cast as a Mexican for eight years," explains Darrow, who played a Mexican lawyer on General Hospital, dubbed Mexican films into English, and toiled in Spanish-language soap operas during that time. "My new image was a hair and name change. I had lost a couple of interviews because of my real name—Henry Thomas Delgado. I played around with some substitutes: Del Thomas, Henry Dell, Del Henry. Darrow just came out of left field."

Dortort had been vainly searching for him under his former name, Delgado. "As soon as he finally showed up," the producer recalls, "I said to myself: 'Boy, is he ever right for Manolito.'"

On the Vasquez Rocks location, Darrow occupied himself between scenes by squeezing a hand exerciser. The slender actor had recently experienced difficulty lugging a saddle through a scene that lasted 17 takes. Eventually, the saddle had to be propped up on a fence. Now he was building up his strength in anticipation of future saddle scenes.

He was no more proficient sitting in the saddle than carrying it. "The → first time we were gonna do some riding," he recalled, brushing away a horsefly, "I did a quick mount and raced through a courtyard. In come 20 soldiers on horseback. They are being attacked by 70 Apaches, firing rifles. All of a sudden I saw Leif Erickson, on foot, out of the corner of my eye. I thought: 'My God, I'm gonna run over him.' I swerved away from him, but my horse in passing him flipped him around."

Erickson, who plays the indomitable Big John Cannon, fell on his wrist and broke it. This was not the first setback for the Chaparral troupe in its pursuit of realism. Cameron Mitchell, Big John's lusty younger brother, hobbled around for three months with an infected leg, the result of a smack from a rifle butt. Several directors became dizzy and fainted during the early filming in Arizona.

Slade suffered powder burns when he was shot in the arm with a blank. The horse he was riding in another episode spooked and galloped off the set. The inexperienced Slade kicked his spurs into the runaway animal's flanks, rather than reining him to a halt. He was thrown off the horse, landing on a rockpile. The .45-caliber pistol on Slade's hip jammed into his leg socket. It required a whiff of smelling salts and two days of hospitalization to return him to action.

After that incident, the Chaparral principals were forbidden to wear spurs for a time. As a further precaution, the pistols currently employed in close-up fighting and falling scenes are made of rubber.

Such compromises have failed to affect the show's look of reality, the principle which underlies all of Dortort's thinking. "Another theory in Hollywood is that anyone with dark hair or dark eyes can play an Indian," he says. "I won't use Greeks or Filipinos. I want Indians to play Indians."

One of Chaparral's greatest coups was uncovering the ideal Indian for Cochise, the legendary Apache leader. Director Bill Claxton screened dozens of prospects at a Tucson motel. Among them was a blue-eyed, 94-year-old man hobbled by a wooden leg.

"Name, please," said Claxton.

"Cochise," the man answered.

"No, no," Claxton explained. "You're up for the part of Cochise. Don't you understand English?"

"Dammit," the Indian replied, "I am Nino Cochise. I am the grandson of Cochise."

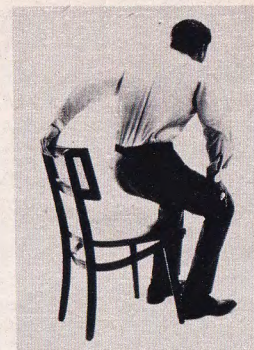

Dortort remained skeptical. But a pedigree authenticated by the Arizona Historical Society proved that the original Cochise died two months after his grandson was born and christened Nino, literally: "The Little" Cochise. Comparisons made with daguerreotypes of the old chief reveal an uncanny facial resemblance.

"High Chaparral's effect on the tourism, publicity and economy is bound to be historic," predicted a bullish representative of the Old Tucson Development Company, anticipating a migration similar to the Nevada Ponderosa influx.

The show's impact on the economy of Dortort's Xanadu Productions quite likely will be just as significant. Some 22 nations purchased the series for television airing months before the first episode reached American viewers. The pilot will be released as a feature film for Western-happy overseas markets, another portent of sizable financial dividends.

"We don't have to concoct these ridiculous, phony, fictional stories that you see on the air all the time," said Dortort, sipping a gin and tonic at a restaurant near the Paramount studios. "The Virginian, for example, is a disgrace. It's sloppily done. It's dull. It's completely undistinguished. My shows have the look of authenticity. Maybe a little bit more entertainment, too, if you like Indians."

STUDY IN BLACK AND WHITE

Color television is here to stay, but to be effective it doesn't always have to be colorful. Witness the one permanent set for Mission: Impossible, an apartment created to reflect the personality of Peter Graves, the show's top agent, and used as the opening scene in most episodes. It's all black and white, even down to the clothes people wear because, says Bruce Geller, executive producer, "There's nothing quite as arresting in color as black and white. It brings out the color in the faces and it's a contrast. Then when you cut to something in color, the effect is startling." If you don't have a color set, it looks just as black and white as everything else. The cast, left to right, are Greg Morris, Barbara Bain, Peter Lupus, Martin Landau and Graves.

GARRISON'S GORILLAS

REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

If you steal from one author, the late Wilson Mizner once said, it's plagiarism; if you steal from many, it's research. This show has been well-researched. Take half the idea of the movie "The Dirty Dozen" and the other half the idea of half-a-dozen television shows, and you've got it: criminals guaranteed their freedom after the war provided that, during the war, they perform deeds of derring-do.

And the derring they do is daring indeed. During the titles alone the Gorillas shoot up half the German Army; then, in the body of the show, they really go to work. A while back, for example, in the middle of Nazi-land, in the middle of the war, they had to break into a burglar-proof Munich safety-deposit vault. Another time they had to get the Nazi design for a "homing torpedo," which was locked in a safe under a 24-hour guard. Still another time they had to kidnap a German general—one who had defected but had then been detected. Each of these feats involved the assassination of countless men. "All I did was kill one lousy Kraut," one says. "It was an unnecessary risk," Garrison snaps. Meanwhile, of course, the most that ever happens to any of the GI GG's is, at worst, a minor "It's-nothing-fellows" wound.

Why then, you may well ask, does anyone above the age of consent watch this show? The answer is: There are two good reasons. First of all, Garrison's Gorillas is, despite its no-sense premise and ludicrous one-sidedness, extremely well-acted. And, second, it's well-written. All right, the plots are far-fetched. But what makes them fetching for us is the fact that there are so many conflicts between conflicts—the basic conflict between the Gorillas and the Germans, the conflict between the Gorillas and Garrison, and the conflicts among the Gorillas themselves (they fight each other almost as much as they fight the Germans).

Besides all this we have a brand-new, wholly different kind of conflict between the Gorillas and the guest star. In the rob-the-vault story, for example, guest bank-robber Jack Klugman fought, in the midst of one war, another whole war of his own—one in which he was, of all things, an ally of the Germans. In the homing-torpedo episode Barry Sullivan played a guest cop and the Gorillas were thus forced to defer their greatest hatred. Finally, in the kidnap-the-general episode, guest-star Kevin McCarthy decided to get the general out one escape route, meanwhile using the Gorillas on another route, as expendable diversions. All three of these episodes had switches at the end that were as clever, and yet as valid, as any we have seen this year.

All in all, a second-hand idea and third-degree violence somehow manage, by writing and acting skill, to combine into a first-rate show.

New Meds Tampons make you feel only a little more secure.

But that's a lot.

Faster absorbency. Longer protection. That's the extra security you get with new Meds, the only tampon with this double-protection design: an outer layer of larger fibers that absorb instantly, with an inner layer of tiny fibers that store more, longer.

Comes in the only gentle, flexible plastic applicator.

WALTER CRONKITE interviews heart specialists Dr. CHRISTIAAN N. BARNARD, Dr. ADRIAN KANTROWITZ and Dr. C. WALTON LILLEHEI on The 21st Century for CBS later this season. They'll discuss moral, legal and medical aspects of transplant surgery . . . HERB ALPERT and the TIJUANA BRASS are scouting location sites for their April 22 CBS special. JACK HALEY Jr. and Wolper Productions are shooting the show.

ABC has bought Mac, a new private-eye series from producer QUINN MARTIN (The Fugitive). The hour-long show, with a San Francisco background, debuts next season . . . When ANDY GRIFFITH quits his series this season, that CBS time slot will be filled by Mayberry RFD, starring KEN BERRY as a farmer living outside of town. Most of the current Mayberry residents, including GRIFFITH, will return for occasional guest appearances.

Former TV-series stars are scattered all over the world, making theatrical movies. DAVID JANSSEN goes to Rome for "Shoes of the Fisherman," with Sir LAURENCE OLIVIER and ANTHONY QUINN; INGER STEVENS heads south to Durango, Mexico, for "Five Card Stud," co-starring DEAN MARTIN and ROBERT MITCHUM; and PETER FALK is in BURT LANCASTER's film "Castle Keep," a World War II story . . . For the season's Batman finale, producers BILL DOZIER and HOWIE HORWITZ play millionaires in the episode, which also has ZSA ZSA GABOR as the guest star. . . . BUTCH PATRICK, little Eddie on The Munsters, shows up on NBC's "The Young Loner" segment of Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color Feb. 25 and March 3.

ELMER BERNSTEIN is musical director and conductor for this year's Academy Awards show. The ABC telecast is scheduled for April 8 . . . Production executive DAVID VICTOR (The Man from U.N.C.L.E., Dr. Kildare) has signed an exclusive contract with Universal for movies and TV projects . . . TROY DONAHUE, who hunted jaguars in Venezuela for ABC's American Sportsman, sets his sights on some antelope in another segment of the series.

Some of JACK BENNY's old friends, people like BOB HOPE, DANNY THOMAS and SANDY KOUFAX, are scheduled for cameo appearances on his NBC March 20 special, which already has LUCILLE BALL, JOHNNY CARSON, BEN BLUE, and PAUL REVERE and the RAIDERS on tap . . . NBC has set April 2 as the air date for PETULA CLARK's special . . . Another NBC special tells us "Noel Harrison Is Where the Girls Are" April 23, which should be a fun-evening for NOEL.

GEORGE MAHARIS, who toured Route 66 a few seasons back, went to London for "Split Champagne," a comedy on English television . . . DICK CLARK has a new series in the works--a half-hour Hollywood variety show called And Now . . . PERNELL ROBERTS plays a murder suspect in an Ironside. ROBERT LANSING (12 O'clock High) portrays a police officer in another segment.

This is the only picture I could find of myself at 262 pounds.

Recognize me here?
I'm down to 145 pounds.

I wore a coat even in summer, until I lost 117 pounds.

By Kathleen Kersat—told to Ruth McCarthy

It didn't matter whether the temperature was sixty-five or ninety-eight. When I weighed 262 pounds, I was so ashamed, I wore a coat wherever I went.

I had been fat all my life. I just ate too much. After Ithaca School of Nursing, I studied at Cornell Medical Center. Still I did nothing about my weight, even though the doctors were at me constantly. I tried reducing wafers, prescription pills, even a diuretic. But nothing moved that mountain of fat.

How did a stout girl like me find a husband? The man I married is of German parentage. And maybe a nice, strong girl just looked good to him.

One day, however, I took a good, long look at myself. I was 262 pounds. I didn't want to go anywhere. Or do anything. At 35, life was a bore. That's when I decided to go on a low-carbohydrate diet. But I couldn't have stuck to it without help. So I bought a box of Ayds, the reducing-plan candy.

I took one or two Ayds as directed before meals. And this actually helped me cut back my appetite without any harmful drugs. I eventually went from a size 28½ dress down to a size 14. But I know one thing. No one can persuade another to lose weight. You have to do that yourself. Once you do, then you must look for help. My help was Ayds.

If you think we have a space problem here, imagine the disaster on match book covers. Notwithstanding, we've become the most popular extra puffs in America. Our disadvantages must have had something to do with it.
